RAILROAD ENCOURAGES ART.

Santa Fe Buys Costly Paintings for Advertising Purposes.

One of the largest orders for railroad pictures ever given by a railway company is now being executed in Denver. C. H. Harmon is at work in his Denver studio on an order of 24 paintings for the Santa Fe railway. The canvases are to be the largest ever put out by a company in one order.

Three of them are now completed and these are 12x18 feet. They will be hung in the general offices of the Santa Fe railway company and in the principal local offices, one of them being retained in Denver.

The subjects selected for Mr. Harmon's brush are scenes that have attracted hundreds of tourists and travelers to the Santa Fe route. One of those now completed is the old Santa Barbara mission in California, another is the Bay of Avalon on Catalina island, and a third is a view of Coronado beach, San Diego bay, from Point Loma. These views are subjects that are too difficult for the camera.

The background of the view from Point Loma is composed of the mountain range and the haze overhanging this range has rendered a picture of it impossible by the aid of the camera. Mr. Harmon sketched the view when he was in California last winter and the mountains appear in the picture as clearly defined as if no annoyance in the way of mists intervened.

The other pictures are scenes of the Yosemite valley, the Grand canyon of Arizona, the Old Missions of California and Indian Pueblo. These subjects have never yet been painted and the cost of the pictures will be represented in a sum that will run far into the thousands.

The immense canvases will be done in oil and will be works of art that will be protected by heavy insurance. They will be put on exhibition in Denver by the Santa Fe railroad company when done. They will be the first venture of any railway company in the country on such a large scale in using oil paintings to advertise its lines.

The inspiration of the order for these paintings came from Paul Morton, formerly vice-president of the Santa Fe and now in President Roosevelt's cabinet. Mr. Morton has been for years a friend of Mr. Harmon and is a firm believer of the efficacy of advertising by costly paintings.—Denver Post.

The whaler William Bayles arrived at Marshfield November 14, with 10,000 pounds of bone and 400 barrels of oil. She had on board 59 pounds of flour and a crew of 48 men.

UNDERWOOD WINS.

Competition in Typewriters at the Postoffice—Visible Writing Wins Out Over the Smith-Premier.

J. S. Kees, local agent for the Underwood typewriter, and Mr. Huston, traveling agent for the Smith-Premier typewriter, met at the postoffice yesterday to show the merits of their respective machines. The Underwood was found equal in every particular to the Smith and had many points that were superior. Some of them were visible writing, the tabulator, changing ribbons, removing type bars, the marginal stops were in front, type more easily cleaned, carbon copies put in and taken out without catching. Mr. Huston tried to show that a double keyboard was superior to a single keyboard, but when all the leading machines except the Smith use the single keyboard it is hardly necessary to show which leads. Mr. Kees is willing to place his machine on trial against any other make, and if not found satisfactory the same can be returned. The Underwood took the grand prize at the St. Louis exposition over all makes. As a result of the contest an Underwood was sold.
